DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-7 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Wright (US Pat# 5,707,358).

Wright discloses a dual concentric balloon catheter (10) that includes a tubular body with a lumen having an external opening (23,24 or 40) adjacent the first end and a balloon (11). The lumen also includes a second opening (27 or 28) in fluid communication with the interior of the balloon. The external opening adjacent the first end generates a back-flow within the lumen which causes the fluid to enter and inflate the balloon through the second opening (see 4:14-18). The external opening has a predetermined area and the second opening has a predetermined area, the predetermined area of the second opening is greater than the predetermined area of the external opening (see 4:19 and 4:23-25). The catheter body is made from a silicone elastomer and therefore flexible. The device also includes a moveable sheath (22) that can be moved to a first position (sutured position) to cover a portion of the body to add rigidity and can be moved to a second position (suture-free) to uncover a portion of the body (see 3:44-46). The balloon can be inflated to form substantially elliptical and spherical shapes (see figures 2 and 6). The balloon is made from polyurethane (see 4:35). Regarding the function language, the prior art device is considered capable of achieving the function as claimed since this reference meets all the structural limitations of the claims.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 9, 11-16 and 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Wright.

Wright meets the claim limitations as described above but fails to include a syringe for delivering fluid to the catheter. At the time of the invention, it would have been obvious to incorporate a syringe into the invention. Syringes are well known in the art to be used as a balloon inflation mechanism. One skilled in the art would have relied on their knowledge of commonly used devices for inflating balloon in order to use an easily accessible mechanism to perform the procedure of the device.
